These sardines are fished from September to December when they have more meat on them, more flavour and nutrients.

After the fish are processed, tinned and sterilized, they are matured for 6 months before sale. It is in this phase that, thanks to the particular conditions of humidity and temperature in the outer Rome region, the so-called enzymatic processes are activated. Processes that allow the meat to begin to take on the characteristic aroma and flavour, a bit like a fine wine being left to mature. The product is characterized by a high aromatic persistence and sweet and salty flavours with intense notes of sardines and a slight hint of olive oil.
