

'Ok, I'm back from Down Under and I have to report that finger limes are the future. The caviar of the citrus world. Citrus australisica, should you want to look it up.' (Nigella Lawson, February 2018)

THE FINGER LIME is Australia's native citrus – naturally occurring in the wild only around the Queensland and New South Wales border ranges, north to the Sunshine Coast hinterland and south to Byron Bay. Finger Lime trees grow up to 10 metres, the fruits are green and cylindrical in shape, up to 100mm long and only about 20-30mm in diameter. There are close to 80 known wild varieties and 15 are grown commercially.

Inside the skin are hundreds of juice filled pearls that pop in the mouth with a burst of flavour, giving a unique lime sensation. The fruit contains an acid juice similar to that of a lime with a delicious aroma of fresh, zesty citrus and a hint of cooked apples. Finger limes taste, structure, and myriad of culinary uses place them in high regard with the world's elite chefs.

Juice vesicles are compressed with tiny, tangy jewels and burst out (staying in one piece) when the skin of the fruit is cut, enabling them to be used in creative ways. The colour ranges from opaque, light green, dark green, pink, orange-red, red or crimson.

LIME PEARLS have been used by indigenous Australians for thousands of years as a food additive and medicine. They contain no preservatives, no additives, no colouring, are fat free, salt free, high in vitamin C, folate and antioxidants. These fresh and zesty jewels will complement perfectly both savoury and sweet cuisines and will make an exciting addition to seafood, especially oysters.
